At the beginning you shouldn't mind taking ideas and guides from the internet. This dragon was based on a picture in internet too. Hopefully the originator doesn't mind as well....

For sure, you'll need a huge stump, this one was about 60cm in diameter

And as a beginner you'll notice that your little 30cm chainsaw will not be really sufficient anymore.....

Starting to remove the wood around dragon' head and shaping his body..

Do the rounding with chainsaw and grinder...

Finalize the details and you may add a tail.

I tried to keep him natural with just a little of protection on it. After one year, dragon became grey and he got a nice facelift...
